A West Ashley man is dead…and authorities suspect murder.

A report from the Charleston County Sheriff’s Office says 37-year-old Hurley Funderburk the third was found last night…slumped over in his car with blood on his left side. Around nine o’clock a resident in the Magnolia and Forbes Avenue area called police to report that a fast car drove by then crashed through a fence and into a neighbor’s home. According to the report…a sheriff’s detective…who was nearby investigating drug activity…responded quickly to the crash. There…Funderburk was found in the car bleeding. Deputies says they also noticed two cracks in the windshield…the rear window busted out…and a 22-caliber bullet behind the victim’s car. So far no arrests have been made. Funderburk had lived on Trailmore Drive in West Ashley.
